

WHO ARE REBOOT THEATRE COMPANY?

Reboot Theatre are eleven actors who created our company in summer 2015. We staged Macbeth: Reboot as student actors at Morley College in July this year. We felt inspired by the play, our director and our interpretation: our reboot of it. So we are taking it further, are making it even bolder and are staging it again. We are supporting the production of the play ourselves.

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

When I began to examine the idea of directing a production of Macbeth I found myself becoming very excited about two areas that seemed increasingly key to any production I might create. One was the realization that a physical telling of the story, alongside the magnificent text would be essential, and afford us a whole world of theatrical possibilities. The second was the increasing fascination with the thought that I could make the 'voices in Macbeth's head' become a physical manifestation and that the same could be done with Lady Macbeth – a virtual birthing of the new, darker characters and the chance that the 'other self' that is left behind could still have a life, could observe and ultimately try and redeem themselves.

These concepts were at the forefront in early rehearsals and began to organically point a way forward and a way for our company to work and create theatre.
